Belleville Law - Nearly all professional athletes come to the conclusion that getting legal assistance while constructing player contracts is in their best interest.

There are several similarities between player contracts and various legal contracts that lawyers handle daily. Additionally, the athlete is commonly better represented by a third-party negotiator. Salaries, bonuses, and any other conditions that are outlined in the player contract could generally be raised through forceful, skilled negotiation.

Generally, athletes are more concerned with home runs, goals and touchdowns than they are with the fine nuances of contract negotiations. Due to our knowledge and expertise concerning contract negotiation, our company is proud to have some clients who are prominent professional athletes.
